

About the event

The World Championships is the jewel in the crown of the IAAF's global competition programme. It is the third-largest sporting event in the world, involving athletes from 200 nations competing for 47 gold medals. The first World Championships in Athletics was held in Helsinki in 1983. Today, the competition is staged every two years, normally in the month of August.

About the event

Road running's international elite compete against the backdrop of some of the world's most attractive locations in this annual event. The championships were first held in 1992 as part of the UK's Great North Run, the largest mass participation road race in the world. The event includes men's and women's races with individual and team honours at stake. It is usually held on public roads, often with the addition of a public mass entry race, in the month of March.
