PROGRESSION OF OFFICIAL WORLD RECORDS

This section lists progressive world record performances as ratified by the IAAF or the Fédération Sportive Féminine Internationale (FSFI), which was absorbed by the IAAF in 1936. Though the IAAF was founded in 1912, its first list of world records contained marks which were set as early as 1870.

AUTOMATIC TIMING

From 1975, the IAAF accepted separate, automatic electrically timed records for events up to and including 400m. From 1977 only automatic timing was considered for world records in these events. Automatic timing to hundredths was accepted for events up to and including 10,000m from 1981. Where known, unofficial automatic times are given – in a smaller typeface – next to the ratified “tenth” time. Ratified automatic times are always given in larger type.

INDOOR WORLD RECORDS

From 1998, IAAF rule 260.18a (formerly 260.6.a) was amended to state that world records (as opposed to indoor world records) can be set at a facility “with or without” a roof. So far only one event – the women’s pole vault – has been affected by this change, which was not applied retrospectively. Therefore world indoor records set in 2000 and 2001 by Stacy Dragila and Svetlana Feofanova are regarded as “absolute” and appear in these lists.

A similar rule change occurred in the late 1980s, when the 2.42 high jump of Carlo Thränhardt (FRG), made indoors, was accepted as equalling the existing world (outdoor) record. However after that version of the ruling was rescinded, this mark was subsequently deleted as a world record and is not included in this section.

ROAD RECORDS

From January 1, 2004 the IAAF has recognised official world records at 10Km, 15Km, 20Km, Half Marathon, 25Km, 30Km, Marathon, 100Km, Road (Ekiden) Relay and also the 20Km and 50Km Walks. Progressions are also given here for best performances in the road running and walking events prior to their acceptance as official world record events.

OMISSIONS

Except for road events, excluded from this section are unrated marks, performances which were originally accepted as world records then annulled, and indoor-only world records.

The data in this section is based on “Progression of World Best Performances and Official World Records”, edited on behalf of the IAAF originally by Richard Hymans and then Imre Matrahazi.

Road events – world bests and world records

These were accepted by the IAAF as world bests from January 1, 2003 and world records from January 1, 2004. Listed is the progression of world bests prior to official acceptance and superior unrated marks thereafter. Indented are marks set on uncertified or aided courses which do not fulfill the criteria specified in IAAF Rule 260.28.b (separation between start and finish points should not be more than 50% of race distance) or 260.28.c (the decrease in elevation should not be greater than one in a thousand). Records ratified by the IAAF are shown in bold. + denotes marks set en route to longer distances

Heptathlon

From 2010, IAAF rule 260.27 stated that – for record purposes – the average wind speed of the three affected events shall not exceed plus two metres per second. The ruling is not retrospective, but if it were then the affected marks are shown with the superscript *.

Road events – world bests and world records

These were accepted by the IAAF as world bests from January 1, 2003 and world records from January 1, 2004. Listed is the progression of world bests prior to official acceptance and superior unrated marks thereafter. Indented are marks set on uncertified or unaided courses which do not fulfill the criteria specified in IAAF Rule 260.28.b (separation between start and finish points should not be more than 50% of race distance) or 260.28.c (the decrease in elevation should not be greater than one in a thousand). Record ratified by the IAAF are shown in bold. + denotes marks set en route to longer distances
